Core Business vs Non Core Business...

As an employer your main focus is to generate revenue and earn profit with your core business. Your objective is to undertake tasks in order to operate successfully in your chosen industry.

The core business of any company should be what they are best at doing. While people are integral to the successful execution of an employer's core business, the recruiting process is not your core business.

The best utilization of your resources would be to evaluate how Buzy Bodies outsourcing and off site human resources will help you generate more profits while you do your core business.

Forget Do-It-Yourself...

HR management grows more complex every year. It gets more difficult to focus on your core business when you are trying to master a variety of administrative HR tasks. How do you balance the bottom line with everything you have to do?

The answer is you don't have to do everything yourself. Continue doing what you do best, and outsource the rest to a human resource outsourcing company like Buzy Bodies.

Outsourcing HR doesn't mean we take the place of your current HR people. Rather, it means you can free them to be more strategic and focus on business success rather than filling forms and managing multiple vendors.

Buzy Bodies takes care of the HR management portion of your business, and can position you competitively in the talent market by giving your employees the "large company" benefits they expect and deserve.

What kind of ROI can I expect by making my human resources function more strategic?
